It isn't as far as I know; I think they were just happy to get a professional opinion. I've confessed to Em that I read the whole thing in an evening, though I admit it's because I have no self-control and was meant to be doing my Frankfurt reading. She's outlined the rest of the story as well, and Michelle tells me she'd be very happy to work on it and do revisions with some guidance. If you wanted to buy it she'd be surprised and delighted I think.

I'm ccing Em because I know she was intending to read it, and I coincidentally nagged her earlier today.

Thanks, both.
L.

Hi Lucy - I'm just getting to this now but on what I've read I think your friend has something here. I need to read more though. I like the sparse style and it's really atmospheric. Is it with an agent? R

From a friend of one of my oldest friends--I've just read fifty pages and wonder, too much of a Twilight homage meets Samantha the Teenage Witch via Sweet Valley High? Or just enough? I'm strangely intrigued and wonder if either of you cares to have a flick through. If not that's fine too I'll persevere and maybe send to an agent friend in the States.
